Troubleshooting

When readers still see the old version, the change is usually saved but not published yet. Find what you changed below.

You edited an article

The status next to the buttons at the top of the article editor tells you where your edits are:

The editor shows	What it means	What to do
Unpublished edits	The article is live, but your latest edits aren't.	Click Update .
Draft saved	The article is saved, but it isn't published.	Click Publish .
Not saved	The draft exists only in your browser.	Click Save draft , then Publish when it's ready.

Staged changes

Your edits are in a staged copy. Readers still see the live version.

Click Publish changes.

Staged · in "Name"

The edits belong to a change set.

They go live when the change set is published, or at its scheduled time.

Published

Readers can see this version.

See "Your browser shows an older copy" below.

Pause your plan

Plans & billing Version History

Going away for a while? Pause your plan for up to three months and pay nothing while it is paused.

1. Open Billing → Plan.
2. Select Pause plan.
3. Choose a restart date and confirm.

Home Dock still charges while your plan is paused, at the standard rate.

1 Edit a live article. Your changes stay private for now

Edits to a live article go public when you click Update.

Staged changes and change sets are part of the Catalyst plan and are in early preview. See Edit live articles safely with staged changes.

You translated an article

Readers see a translation only after it's released. In the language bar, pick the language and turn on Released. See A translation doesn't show.

You changed the design

Everything you change in the template editor saves to a draft. All changes saved means your draft is safe, not that it's live. Visitors see the new design after you click Publish, add an optional note and click Publish again. See Publish your design.

You're looking at a different help center

Your browser shows an older copy

1. Give it a moment after you publish, then reload the page.
2. Open the page in a private window where you're not signed in. That's exactly what readers see.

Signed in, you can also see things your readers can't, such as private articles and team-only categories. If readers are missing an article you can see, see Someone can't see an article or the help center.

Still stuck?

Contact our support team with the address of the page and what you changed. See Contact HelpCenter.io support.
